Hi Phyllis;

After more review I have a hard time accepting the amount stated in your e-mail regarding NWT regulations that Nunavut has adopted (see below) as we are not required to submit payment to NWT if we do not consume more than 100 cubic metres a day. In fact we are not even required to have a water licence if we stay below this amount in the NWT. This needs immediate attention as we still require our NU permit which is below 100 cubic metres and I do not want to comprise what we already hold in place. Perhaps you could look into this again for me.

• Subsection 9(1) of the Northwest Territories Waters Regulations (the current water regulations in force in Nunavut) states "Subject to subsections (4) and (5), the fee payable by a licensee for the right to the use of water, calculated on an annual basis, is...". This clearly outlines that water use fees payable by a licensee are for the right to use water, NOT for the amount of water used by the licensee.

Thanks,

Graham

Hi Phyllis;

We have had this conversation before. I still do not see the need to pay an annual amount especially according to our Licence; if we only use “x” cubic gallons per day for say a 90 day period rather than a whole year, then this should be pro-rated Our operations are exploration in nature and not a year long event. Our operations are not mining or community related, therefore we do not see the need to pay for a full year. Our project activities are also outlined in annual reports that show the dates in which we used water. Why cannot INAC/ NWB use these numbers to calculate the actual fee? If the powers that be suggest we pay for a full year then why am I submitting annual reports that document our ACTUAL water use-age? Once again I have to ask the question “why am I paying for something I don’t use?”!!!!!

Please see attached regarding an incorrect water use payment on the above file. Your cheque is being returned to you. I have also provided, within the letter, an explanation direct from INAC on the payment of fees.
