You must also keep in mind, NPC can hang on to any land use application as long as it feels it needs to. We are not given any time frame to complete a review. Therefore NPC is not pressured in any way to complete an application at a certain time. As the NLCA those not give us a time frame to complete a review. It will probably never come to this, but, if required, we can hold an application for a year or more, those are the rights given as I understand it in the NLCA. If it does not conform to the plan, in the Bands mind, it can be held up, they are given that same power under those clauses.

Hi Stephanie,

The process in reviewing for conformity generally takes at least two weeks, depending on NPC duties in the review, as well as the applicants response to the questionnaire sent to him last week. which are complete as I stated in the e mail.

I must give the bands at least two (about the time it takes NPC) weeks, as per s. 40.4.8 & 40.5.7. This is not a community consultation. If they choose to make representation it would only be limited to matters involving the review portion as to its conformity to the Keewatin Plan and the would not go beyond the Keewatin Land Use Plan.

They have been given copies of conformity requirements the applicant must undersign to and are, as per sections mentioned out of the NLCA able to voice concerns to the applicants answers. This is were the general time frame of two weeks come in. About the time it takes to review an application.

Hi Brian...out of curiosity, does NPC have to have the approval of the Manitoba and SK bands before it grants conformity? The conformity is only as it pertains to the Keewatin Land Use Plan is it not? This being said, shouldn't consultation with the Bands then be left up to NIRB?

Thanks.

Steph

FYI, NPC has completed it's review for conformity with the Keewatin Regional Land Use Plan on the above application. We have given the Bands of Northern Manitoba and SK a two week period to respond. Therefore file will be held until April 8, 2002

Any questions, please do not hesitate
