To whom it may concern:

Enclosed is a completed water licence application for a planned archaeological project located on the eastern shore of Peterhead Inlet approximately 10 km west of Iqaluit. The project will entail excavation of the Tungatsivvik site (borden number KkDo-3) and a pedestrian survey of the area surrounding the site to locate additional archaeological sites in the region. The crew for this project will be camping adjacent to the Tungatsivvik site. The projected amount of water to be used is 20 litres per day, and will only be used for drinking, cooking, and other domestic activities.

Included in this application package is the water license application form, project summary, area maps, supplementary questionnaire for exploration/remote camps, fuel spill contingency plan, email correspondence with Jeff Rusk and Amanda Hanson of the Nunavut Impact Review Board (NIRB) stating NIRB screening is not required, email correspondence with Bobby Suluk of the Nunavut Planning Commission (NPC) stating that a conformity review is not required for the project, and the administration and water use fee.

If any additional documents are required or if you have any questions or concerns with the application I can be contacted by email at anne_hamilton@umanitoba.ca or phone at (204) 880-4700

Thank you,

Anne Hamilton
