The NWB recognizes the importance of this project for Nunavut in general and the Inuit of the Kitikmeot in particular, and believes that the public must be involved throughout the review and approval of these submissions. To this end, the NWB is proposing to hold written hearings before approving these submissions, which will result in a fair and expeditious process. However, the NWB reserves the right to convene a public hearing on any of these submissions if determined to be in the public interest, in which case the NWB Rules of Practice and Procedure for Public Hearings will apply.

As a general rule, and unless the NWB decides otherwise, the NWB will give interested persons at least thirty days from the time a submission has been deemed complete by the NWB, to make representations. During that period, the NWB may decide to hold technical and community meetings to facilitate the exchange of information and the resolution of issues between BRI and interested persons. After reviewing the representations submitted before the deadline, the NWB will give BRI at least ten days to respond or provide additional information. The NWB will then meet to review all submissions and make a decision in a timely fashion.

The NWB will issue additional procedural instructions, including deadlines for representations and rebuttal and dates of technical and community meetings, regarding each submission as they are filed with the NWB.

Please contact the NWB should you have any questions or concerns.

Sincerely,
