Good Morning Genevieve,

With NPC what we receive from their office is a Conformity Determination through a letter stating whether the project will require NIRB Screening or not. They don't normally send the full application package. CLEY should forward your application package to us once they have completed their review of the file, so yes we will receive your application information through one of the agencies involved with the review process. In regards to the NWB, depending on the level of permit that you require from them, we may or may not get a referral (if you only require a Class B Water License it would be exempt from NIRB Screening, and therefore we would not receive any documentation from their office to trigger our screening process).

In the end, if we require more information in regards to your project proposal, we will correspond with you after your application is forwarded to us from the any of the agencies mentioned above.

If you require further clarification, please do not hesitate to contact me directly at 867 983 4603.

Subject: Project screening

Good morning,

I am writing to inquire about the requirements for filing a project proposal for an archaeological research project this summer. Briefly, we are proposing to conduct archaeological survey (with possible limited test excavations) for two weeks in the vicinity of Cape Sheridan (approx. 82°30'N, 61°30'W). We will have a small crew of four people, and will establish a tent camp. We will be flying in on a Twin Otter from Resolute (PCSP) and will travel on foot while in the field. I have verbal confirmation from INAC that this is crown land, and we fall below the threshold for a permit from them. I am in the process of applying for a water license, and have submitted an application for an archaeological research permit.

In reading the NIRB Guide 3, it appears that since the project is located in the North Baffin region, both the NWB and CLEY will forward our applications to NPC, who will forward it to you. Is this correct?

Thanks,

Genevieve
