It is understood that you have provided complete and accurate information to insurers and that you have complied with your legal duty to disclose, before inception of the insurance contract, all material matters relating to the risk (i.e. all information which would influence the judgment of a prudent insurer in determining whether to underwrite the risk and if so upon what terms and at what premium). If all such information has not been disclosed, insurers have the right to void the policy from inception which may lead to claims not being paid. If you believe that you may not have complied with this duty, you should contact us immediately.
