Investigative Studies For Iqaluit Nukkiksautiit Project - Water intake for temporary camp

Water intake

A temporary field camp will be located adjacent to an unnamed lake along the Kuugaluk River, in Nunavut. For camp operation a temporary water intake will be used to support an 18-person seasonal field camp located 100 m from the high-water mark. The intake consists of a flexible, screened hose connected to a portable 3 HP gas-powered pump. The pump will remain on land, and the hose will be placed in shallow water near the shoreline to fill 205 L drums as needed for non-potable camp use (e.g., showering, cooking). The intake hose will be removed from the water when not in use. There are no permanent in-water structures, and the system is designed to minimize interference with navigation.
