

Re: application for approval for the use of water without a licence

Wed, Jan 25, 2017 at 7:45 AM

Should I do it only after we receive a decision also from NIRB?

NWB will likely forward the application after two weeks at most. But NIRB will need a much longer time to reach their decision, sometimes around two months.

As for last year's application, I sent it twice to many email addresses at NWB (including yours, if I remember correctly). Please find it attached. It was not returned with an "undeliverable" message, so I assumed that it arrived to the addressed inboxes.

It was sent mid-April, after NPC reached their decision, and while the application was under NIRB's review.

We received NIRB's decision mid-May.

Thank you again

Johann

Hi Johann,

The application form used previously could be used now. Also, you may be aware that due to recent regulatory changes in Territory all project proposals should be first reviewed by Nunavut Planning Commission (NPC) and possibly by Nunavut Impact Review Board (NIRB). Please contact the NPC to see what are their information requirements and get their decision before the NWB process, if it wasn't completed yet.

The application could be submitted at licensing@nwb-oen.ca address. Could you also forward the last message you sent last year to investigate why it wasn't addressed.

Subject: FW: Application to use water without licence - Polar camp Greiner Lake, Cambridge Bay

Dear Madam/Sir,

I am forwarding to these email addresses too the application package I submitted last week for using water without a licence for the POLAR camp at Greiner Lake, Cambridge Bay, since I am not certain to which email it should go.

Please see below and attached.

Thank you
