Hi Cynthia,

I have amended the waste management section below. Can you confirm this is acceptable as we discussed?

Thanks very much,

Kristyn

Waste Management

Human waste – Stored in sealed containers and removed from camp at each supply run, which normally occurs every week.

Garbage – Stored in sealed containers and removed from camp at each supply run, which normally occurs every week.

Grey water – Sources of grey water include the bathroom and kitchen facilities. ~~In camps set up on sea ice, holes are augered into the~~ ~~ice to be used as drains from each of these facilities:~~ (not applicable for this camp) In camps set on land, a designated area will be chosen away from camp and fresh water sources. Either a naturally existing depression or a dug hole will be used as a sump. All grey water will be deposited here and allowed to seep naturally into the ground. Only biodegradable soaps are used.

Organic waste – Collected and deposited into the ocean away from camp. ~~In sea ice camps, holes are augered into the ice and used as a drain.~~ (not applicable for this camp) In land camps, a deposit site is chosen away from camp where waste will be taken away at high tide. There are some camp locations where neither of these options is viable and in these instances, organic waste is treated as garbage and removed from camp. The deposit of organic waste will be at least 200m from sleeping quarters and preferably downwind.

No food, garbage or animal food should be left outside unattended. Animal food will be stored in sealed containers and kept away from sleeping quarters. Uneaten animal food will not be left out overnight. All spills should be cleaned up immediately.
