A satellite map of Bylot Island, Nunavut, Canada. The map shows the rugged terrain of the island, with snow-covered peaks and rocky outcrops. The surrounding waters are labeled Baffin Bay to the north and Cape Graham Moore to the south. A yellow star marks the location of a field camp, which is situated on the eastern coast of the island. A white box highlights the area around the star, and an arrow points to it with the label 'Murre Colony'. The text 'Bylot Island' is prominently displayed in the center-left. At the bottom, there is a legend indicating that the yellow star indicates the location of the field camp. The map is credited to Google Earth and lists data sources: SIO, NOAA, U.S. Navy, NGA, and GEBCO.
